Dear Alumni/ae and Friends of the UK College of Law:

It is a pleasure to write you as Acting Dean of the UK College of Law. I am honored to serve in this position this academic year while our search for a permanent dean continues. My colleague Bob Schwemm served admirably as Acting Dean last year, but pressing personal and professional commitments prevented him from doing so for a second year. That is the College of Law's loss, but during my year in the position I will try to meet the high standards of leadership that Bob displayed as Acting Dean. It is an exciting time to have the opportunity to serve in the dean's office.

We are all delighted by our recent recognition in national rankings. Notably, the College of Law was listed among the "Top Tier" of the best 50 law schools in the country by "U.S. News and World Report". This level of recognition is good news for our school and its graduates.

Additionally, we were pleased to be ranked among the law schools most friendly to women in A Woman's Guide to Law School. Author Linda Hirshman found our school to be first in its grouping of schools based on admission criteria and among the nation's top 25 percent of law schools in percentage of women students and faculty and in terms of the success of women students. These rankings confirm what we at the College of Law and our graduates have known for years—we offer a top-notch educational opportunity and an environment in which all students can thrive.

We are also at the beginning of the University of Kentucky's promising capital campaign. For the College of Law, because of the extraordinary support of our graduates, this is a great opportunity to improve our school in all respects. We are delighted that Orson Oliver (Class of '68) has agreed to chair this campaign, and I know that under his leadership and with your help we will succeed in meeting our ambitious goal. You will be hearing more from me about this campaign in the months to come, and I know that you will be generous with your support.

What makes this a promising time for the College of Law is what has become a tradition for us—bright and energetic students, talented and productive faculty members, dedicated and skilled staff, and successful and supportive graduates.

I look forward to meeting with as many of you as possible during my year in the dean's office. Please stop by whenever you are on the campus. We are always glad to see you.

THE ADMISSIONS PROCESS

Recently Drusilla Bakert, Associate Dean for Admissions, Scholarships and Student Affairs, spoke with Ralph Derickson, UK Public Relations, about the law school admissions process. Following is a transcript of their conversation.

When does the College of Law consider candidates for admission?

We start accepting applications for admission on September 1 of the year prior to expected enrollment. We are right now accepting applications for the Fall 2000 entering class.

An admissions file is considered ready for Committee review when we have a completed application and personal statement, the candidate's LSDAS (Law School Data Assembly Service) report and any letters of recommendation the candidate has told us to expect. Our Committee meets once in November and once in December to consider applications that are complete early in the process. We then meet weekly beginning in mid-January and continuing until about the third week of April.

How does the College of Law admissions process work?

At UK Law we have an Admissions Committee made up of seven members: myself as chair, five faculty members and one student member. The Committee votes on every single admissions file. Before each meeting, all complete files not yet considered are divided among the seven members of the Admissions Committee. Each committee member reads all of their files in full, and every committee member reads a summary of each file to be presented at the meeting. Each candidate's file is discussed and voted upon by the full Committee. This means that all information presented by a candidate is considered in the admissions process. But it also means that no candidate will be admitted without a favorable vote of a majority of the committee members.

What characteristics are sought by the Admissions Committee?

For most students, law school is the most difficult academic endeavor they will ever face. So, the first thing the Committee looks for is evidence that the candidate has been successful in academics in the past. We examine his or her undergraduate performance very carefully, the level of courses taken, the difficulty of the course work and major and grade trends by semester. If a student has one bad semester or has a bad freshman year, that won't necessarily keep them out of law school, if their grade trend has been upward. The candidate's LSAT score or scores are also very important, because the LSAT is our only standard measurement of predicted performance in law school. These are the "academic predictors" the Committee looks to first.

Do you recommend any particular major as the best preparation for law school?

No, I do not. Law school requires only that you know how to read, write and think, and a candidate can learn those things (or fail to learn them) in any good undergraduate program. A student tends to do best in a major selected because they are interested in the subject matter, not because the major was recommended as good preparation for law school. There are in fact 50 different undergraduate majors among the students in this year's entering class.

Should a candidate take the LSAT more than once?

A candidate should prepare carefully for the LSAT and plan to take it only once, if at all possible. The ABA requires for reporting purposes that all scores be averaged. So a candidate never wants to take the LSAT on a "flyer" just to see what it's like. However, many candidates who have a bad first experience with the test improve their score when they retake the LSAT, and the admissions committee will see all scores and read any explanations for why the first score was lower.

How should a candidate prepare to take the LSAT?

By working over and over again on sample test questions. The LSAT does not ask for specific factual information. It tests skills a student should have developed in his or her undergraduate training, such as reading comprehension, analytical ability, and logical reasoning ability. The best way to prepare is to take sample LSAT questions repeatedly until you're sure of the logic behind the questions and how to sort through the answers. You need to quickly get to the one or two answers that look correct and be able to pick the correct one. It's also a matter of timing. Every test question counts whether the section is completed or not. Practice over and over again. Do the sections under timed conditions and also take the full test under testing conditions. The best preparation materials are sold by the LSAC and are relatively inexpensive. I always recommend the Triple Prep Plus book, which includes three actual LSATs with the answers to the questions and the reasoning behind the answers.

In addition to academic predictors, what does the Committee consider most important?

The Committee also reads very carefully the candidate's personal statement and writing sample from the LSAT. Strong writing skills are required to be successful in both the practice of law and law school itself. The Committee also expects a candidate to pay very close attention to spelling, grammar and syntax when preparing his or her personal statement. In fact, a candidate with strong writing skills may be admitted ahead of another student with better academic credentials who includes a poorly written, sloppily-edited personal statement.

The Committee looks at undergraduate extracurricular activities, particularly leadership roles, and whether or not the student was working during undergraduate school.

Students should be aware, though, that a long list of undergraduate activities will not make up for poor performance in the classroom. The Committee is also very concerned about any information in the candidate's file that raises an issue about their character and fitness to practice law.

In short, the six factors that are most important to the Admissions Committee are: (1) undergraduate performance; (2) LSAT score; (3) writing skills; (4) life and work experiences, activities and leadership roles; (5) evidence of the character and fitness to practice law; and (6) letters of recommendation. The Committee reads carefully every letter of recommendation received.

What kind of letters of recommendations does the Committee prefer?

Candidates should keep in mind that five of the seven committee members are law faculty, who are most interested in recommendation letters from undergraduate faculty. They want to know what the student is like in the classroom, what they bring to class discussion, how much attention they pay to class assignments and particularly their written and oral skills. They want to know that the student is prepared both mentally and academically for the rigors of law school. They also consider carefully letters from anyone who knows the candidate well and can speak to their character, work habits and desire to be an attorney, such as a mentor, employer, etc. However, faculty letters should be included for all candidates who are recent graduates or still attending undergraduate school.

When a file goes to the Admissions Committee, is a decision to accept or reject the candidate always made right away?

No. When the Committee votes on an application, we make one of three decisions. If everything in the file is great, the undergraduate record and LSAT score, the writing samples and recommendations, then that student is admitted. If everything in the file indicates that the student probably would not be successful at UK Law, then the student is denied. In most cases, there are some things the committee likes and some the members are concerned about. Most of these candidates will be placed on hold, particularly if their file is considered very early in the process. In fact, many candidates will be placed on hold the first time they go to Committee but admitted later in the admissions season.

As the Committee continues to consider new applications, we periodically will review the files on hold and make a final decision on some of those files. Students placed on hold are so advised after the Committee first considers their file, and are encouraged to continue to update their file with new information—an updated transcript, additional recommendations, information about new awards received, etc.—that will be considered by the Committee when their file is next reviewed.

Is diversity considered in the admissions process?

Of course. We want the classroom experience here to reflect as many different viewpoints as possible, and that includes diversity on a number of bases—ethnic and racial diversity, regional diversity within Kentucky and around the nation, diversity of background and experience, etc. We look at academics first, and then take into consideration a candidate's ability to contribute to diversity at the College of Law.

What happens at the end of the admissions season?

On or about the third week of April, the Committee looks at everyone who is still on hold, and all complete files that have not yet been considered. The Committee then decides whom among those candidates to admit, whom to deny admission and whom to place on a waiting list to be held over the summer. If we have candidates who drop out or who decide not to go to law school, we may take people off the wait list and admit them into the fall class.

"One thing that distinguishes UK Law is that our students have rejected cut throat, competitive behavior. Our students have said, 'That's not appropriate. That's not what future members of the bar do to each other.'"

How does UK compare in getting its fair share of the top candidates?

This is a very competitive program. This year, for example, our applicant pool increased by 11% while the national pool was up just over 1%. The reputation of UK Law is going beyond Kentucky. We have done a good job of promoting what UK has to offer both to in-state and out-of-state candidates. A very high percentage of the students who choose to visit the school decide to come here because they like what they see.

How do you get the word out about the process for getting into the UK College of Law?

In the fall, I travel around the state to virtually every undergraduate school in Kentucky to talk to students about the admissions process. These meetings are arranged through each school's pre-law advisor. In fact, at many schools I do an admissions program jointly with Jeri Torbeck, the dean for admissions at U of L. This is something we do as a service for Kentucky students to make sure that the process is not mysterious to anyone.

Also in the fall UK Law holds a Minority Student Visitation Conference and an Open House for all interested candidates, scheduled this year for Saturday, October 23, and Saturday, November 6, respectively. In addition, I frequently meet with individual candidates interested in law school to answer their questions about UK Law. And with the help of the students on our Recruitment Committee, we give tours during the week to interested candidates and permit them to sit in on a first-year class to experience the great teaching that is a hallmark of UK Law.

UK Law is rated among the best schools in the country for 'friendliness' to women students.

Why do you think UK received such a high rating for women?

The reason we got that great rating is that a lot of women have held a number of very important positions within the law school—editorships, memberships on moot court teams, positions in student government—and have been successful academically. It was also based on the number of women on our faculty and their prominence. There are a lot of women students, faculty and alumni who are making a real difference in this law school and in the Commonwealth. And our percentage of female students has been rising steadily, up to 47% in this year's entering class.

I think the key to this place is that it is a law school that is friendly to everybody. Our student leaders include female students, minority students, nonresident students and older, returning students. Students help each other out. They don't rank each other based on how well they do in school. Faculty doors are open; the dean's door is open; the school administrators are here every day and our doors are always open to students.

One of the things that distinguishes UK Law is that our students have rejected cut throat, competitive behavior. Our students have said, "That's not appropriate. That's not what future members of the bar do to each other." Our students understand about forming professional relationships and know that they will need to work well with others to be successful lawyers. They carry a friendly, cooperative attitude into the classroom and into their social lives. They're a great bunch of students.

Do you have any final words of advice for candidates interested in law school?

Yes. Please contact me if you have any questions. The best way to reach me is by e-mail at dbakert@pop.uky.edu, but you can also call me at 606-257-1678. If a parent would like to call me to talk about their child, I am happy to accommodate them, but it is best if the candidate calls me directly. Privacy laws prohibit my sharing information about a candidate's application with anyone else. Finally, the best way to learn about UK Law is to visit us. We are always happy for anyone interested in law school to come and tour our college, get a feel for the friendly atmosphere and sit in on a class. We think this is a great place to learn the law and we are always happy to welcome visitors. Call us at 606-257-1678 if you would like to schedule a visit, or meet with me.

Even with a crystal ball it would be impossible to predict what lies ahead for the legal researcher in the next millennium. The only constant on the legal research horizon is technological change. Legal research tools change. Legal research media change. Legal research topics change. What will not change is that legal research will be inextricably tied to books and libraries for the next twenty years.

As the amount of legal information continues to explode, a legal researcher must examine the quantity and quality of information. This evaluation process is clouded by the changing cast of characters in the long playing drama known as "The World of Legal Publishing." Further hampering any serious effort at interpreting the value of legal information is the tidal wave of facts and figures which arrive daily via the Internet. (See Robert Berring's Finding the Law for an analysis of some of these trends.)

Ultimately legal researchers are faced with the question as to which legal research tools can best be utilized to find the most recent and accurate information at the most reasonable price. Legal research tools change. KeyCite, a more recent West Group case verifying tool, should not be disregarded. Attorneys who fail to update their legal research, by using both Shepard's and KeyCite, stand in great peril.

Legal research has traditionally been bound to its medium. A legal researcher is faced with the dilemma of choosing between many different legal media which are changing. Books and traditional paper resources will continue to be the main course on any legal researcher's plate, for years to come, because many legal sources will exist only in print. CD-ROM, the Web or DVD are formats, however, which also provide a wealth of legal research support and cannot be ignored.

The scope or focus of legal research is also changing. Legal research topics today include an emphasis on administrative law, interdisciplinary research, and international law. Law libraries are hard-pressed to keep up with the demands to purchase specialized materials and services in these areas. Future practitioners cannot afford to lose opportunities for expanded client service that these new fields of legal research provide.

The Changing World of Legal Research

How can the University of Kentucky College of Law Library assist our alumni and friends in this changing world of legal research? Our law librarians have been taught to evaluate the source of legal information. They know how to find information that is accurate and timely. Our librarians have kept abreast of publisher mergers, and they stand ready to join with others who oppose any restrictions which impede the free flow of public access to legal information. Finally, our law librarians are ready to provide instruction for any legal research tool or to recommend a particular legal research format. (University of Kentucky legal information professionals can be reached at 606-257-8686 or by contacting the College of Law website: <http://www.uky.edu/Law/>.)

As Chief Information Officer for the College of Law, I have been interested in introducing technological change into our law school curriculum and into our classrooms. Study carrels wired and connected to the World Wide Web have already been built. Multimedia presentations are routinely utilized by our faculty. An electronic classroom may soon become a reality. A major component of our legal research class instruction deals with the technological changes which face today's legal researcher. Even though the legal community as a whole has been slow to embrace change,

I am confident that the University of Kentucky College of Law will not be left technologically challenged as we enter a new millennium, if we have the continued support of our alumni and friends.

First Kentucky Prosecutors' Institute Held at UK College of Law

▼ The first Kentucky Prosecutors' Institute was held September 15-19, 1999, at the College of Law and was made possible by a grant from Attorney General Ben Chandler (Class of '86). The participants were 44 prosecutors from county and Commonwealth attorneys' offices throughout the state.

John Forgy, a 1996 UK College of Law graduate who is now an Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney in Laurel County, believed he knew the law. What he needed, to better equip himself to help crime victims and serve his community, was something that until September could only be gained through many years of experience as a prosecutor—hands-on trial experience. Through the Kentucky Prosecutors' Institute, a cooperative program of the Kentucky Attorney General's office and the College of Law, Forgy now feels much more confident about his courtroom skills. Modeled after the national training courses offered at the federally funded National Advocacy Center, the Institute is an intense, five-day program. It gave Forgy and other Kentucky prosecutors the opportunity to hear state prosecutors, national speakers and College faculty discuss such topics as grand jury proceedings, preliminary hearings, victim/defendant competency, Miranda warnings, jury selection, evidence presentation, and a myriad of other basic courtroom activities. The Institute covered Kentucky case law, Kentucky rules of evidence, and Kentucky criminal law statutes.

*Attorney General Ben Chandler

"The tips and hands-on experience gained at the Institute were invaluable," says Forgy. "It's simply the best thing like this I've ever attended. How to emphasize a point and what to do with your hands while addressing a jury" are just a few practical courtroom experiences Forgy said he gained during the Institute. But equally valuable, he added, is the nearly four-inch thick handbook put together by staff members in the Attorney General's Office. Forgy indicated he wished he had the information in the booklet when he first started his job. Forgy's boss, Tom Handy, Class of 1969, and Laurel County Commonwealth's Attorney, was an Institute faculty member. Handy, who taught a course on prosecutors' dealings with the media during trials, said the Institute will certainly increase longevity among prosecutors' staffs. "When people enjoy their jobs, they do a better job and stay on the job longer," he said.

The Prosecutors' Institute and the handbook were the work of Tamra Gormley, Class of '88, and Susan Blake, Class of '83, both assistants to Attorney General Chandler. Gormley is the director of the Victim's Advocacy Division, and Blake is director of the Kentucky Prosecutor's Institute. Chandler, who said Kentucky is now the sixth state in the nation to offer such a prosecutors training program, commended his staff members on the Institute's success. "This program will increase dramatically the efficiency and effectiveness of prosecutors in our state's courtrooms and will go a long way in seeing that guilty people are convicted." A major benefit to the Commonwealth, Chandler added, is that it will create camaraderie among our state prosecutors' staffs and help the state retain experienced prosecutors.

The Prosecutors' Institute was funded by a special appropriation requested by Attorney General Chandler from the 1998 General Assembly. The funding was from asbestos litigation handled by the Office of the Attorney General. The proceeds were also used to install high technology trial equipment in the College of Law's courtroom.

For further information about this year's Institute and for registration information for the 2000 Institute, call the Kentucky Attorney General's Office at 502-696-5312.

Student Bar Association

The 1999-2000 Student Bar Association has a busy year ahead. This is the first year that officer elections were held in the spring, which gave the officers a complete summer to prepare for the upcoming year. This preparation included a retreat held in August to build unity and team spirit. In addition, President Kevin Brown, Vice President Jason Otis and former President Jennifer Bryant traveled to the American Bar Association's annual convention in Atlanta, Georgia. The officers learned how bar associations operate at other schools, and they were able to plan some events with Salmon P. Chase and the University of Louisville law schools. As a result, the first annual "Barrister's Bowl" was held the morning before the UK and U of L football game. The bad news is UK lost; the good news is we will travel to Louisville to participate in a Habitat for Humanity building project.

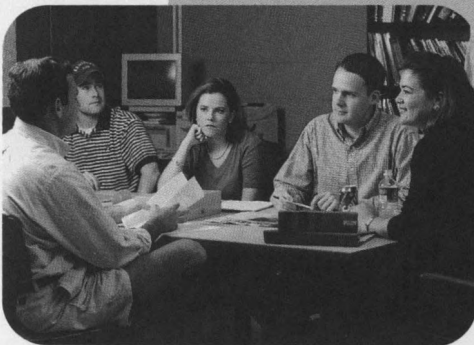

We plan to make this game a tradition between the two schools with the goal of forming friendships within the legal community.

The SBA will continue the traditions of previous years. Last year, the SBA organized several social activities such as the Cardozo Open Golf Scramble, Race Judicata, Barrister's Ball and tailgating at UK home football games. This year, these activities include two planned blood drives, a Thanksgiving food drive to benefit God's Pantry, a clothing drive to benefit the Hope Center and Salvation Army, and support for the Angel Tree program, a program that provides holiday gifts to disadvantaged children. In addition, the SBA organizes the Libel Show Auction, which includes an auction to raise money for the College of Law Student Public Interest Law Foundation. This organization enables students to be paid for public interest legal work in the summer. Last year's Libel Show auction was the most successful in the history of the College of Law, raising over $5,000 to help fund grants for the projects of 26 students.

The SBA looks forward to carrying on these worthwhile traditions while continuing to provide new and innovative opportunities for law students in the coming year.

Phi Delta Phi Legal Fraternity

The Breckinridge Inn of Phi Delta Phi Legal Fraternity at UK recently was recognized as the International Inn of the Year. This is the highest honor bestowed upon a chapter. Phi Delta Phi is a service-based organization devoted to promoting ethics in the legal community. The fraternity is involved in numerous fundraising, educational, and social events through the year, including "Courtroom to Classroom" in which Phi Delta Phi members visit high schools in the Lexington area to make presentations about the case of Brown v. Board of Education. The purpose is to break down racial barriers and promote interest in the College. For further information about the organization, please contact Jay Hatcher at 606-266-2663.

The Black Law Student Association (BLSA) is preparing for a fun-filled and exciting year. Building on last year's successes, which included raising $2,600 toward our annual Civil Rights Fellowship and kicking off the 50 year celebration of African-Americans on the University of Kentucky campus, this year's 20 member BLSA plans on continuing in the line of excellence through awarding the Civil Rights Fellowship and keeping in touch with our community at large.

Trial Advocacy Board Continues Building a Tradition of Excellence

► The College of Law's Trial Advocacy Board (TAB) continued building its reputation for excellence in mock trial competitions with another successful year. For the second year in a row, U.K.'s National Mock Trial Team, coached by Professor Allison Connelly and former regional champion Jason Reed, earned top honors at the American College of Trial Lawyers National Mock Trial Regional Competition. The winning team, comprised of third year law students Beth Howell and Lisa Wilson, were helped by teammates Jeff Fleishacker and Kelly Kaiser. In order to bring home the regional championship, Wilson and Howell competed against fifteen other teams from Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky. The team garnered top honors after performing in five full trials over the course of two and a half days. Winning the regional ranks U.K.'s National Trial Team as one of the top twenty-four mock trial teams in the country. In the last two years, the ATLA Mock Trial Teams, coached by Professor Darlene Goring, have also been successful. The teams have finished in the top eight at the American Trial Lawyers Association Regional Trial Competition.

In November of 1999, TAB will host the first annual Kentucky Mock Trial Tournament between teams of students from Kentucky's three law schools. The brainchild of Professor Connelly, the intrastate trial competition provides an excellent opportunity for all Kentucky law students to compete for personal and school honors while gaining practical trial skills. The competition will also provide an opportunity for future colleagues from the three Kentucky law schools to network with one another and with members of the bar. Money generously donated by the Kentucky Bar Association's two outstanding attorneys for 1999, Charles E. English and Joe C. Savage, will be awarded to the winning championship team.

Alumni from the College of Law have been quick to recognize, support and reward the top mock trial advocates. In 1999, Beth Howell received the James H. Lucas Trial Advocacy Award, Angela Mullins garnered the McCoy & West Trial Advocacy Award, and Lisa Wilson and Wes Browne received the Savage, Garmer & Elliott Trial Advocacy Awards.

JOHN Y. BROWN, SR.

*Remarks by John Y. Brown, Jr. on the occasion of the induction of
John Y. Brown, Sr. into the Alumni
Hall of Fame of the University of
Kentucky College of Law*

Let me tell you about my daddy. I hope I can inspire you with his life story as he inspired me and many, many others. He was a very unusual man born in Union County, the son of a tenant farmer. He did not have a name for six weeks. It just happened that the governor of Kentucky at the time was John Young Brown, so he was named for him. My father studied at Centre College. He was well read in all the Shakespeare plays and well versed in the Bible, both of which prepared him for the career that he said when he was five years old he knew he wanted to be...a trial lawyer. During college, he joined the Chatauqua where he introduced William Jennings Bryant. As a result he had a flair for public speaking that few of us have ever been exposed to.

My father began his political career in 1927 when he ran for state representative. Although he lost that race, he won in 1929 and 1931, and became, at that time, the youngest person to serve as Speaker of the House.

He was later elected to the House of Representatives in 1931, 1945, 1953; and in 1961 and 1965 he served as majority floor leader. He was elected to Congress in 1932 and served during the historic one hundred days of the Roosevelt Administration. As a state representative and as a congressman, Dad was instrumental in writing bills that created the Daniel Boone National Forest, Cumberland Falls State Park, the 1966 Kentucky Civil Rights Act, and during the 1950s he was a pioneering supporter of the state sales tax to support education. In proposing the civil rights legislation, which was considered the most far-reaching ever passed in a southern state up to that time, Dad said "I recognize, as most of you do, that our side is a lost cause, but I also know that when no one will speak for a lost cause, good causes will die."

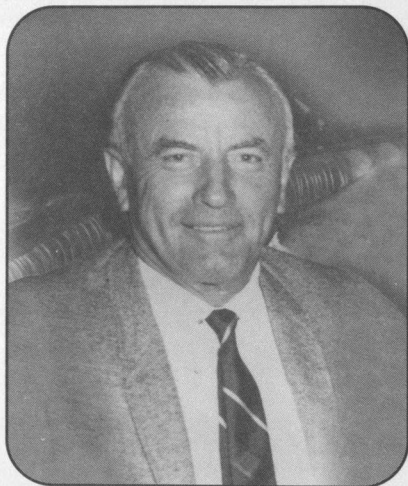

Dad was not just another lawyer. He was a trial lawyer who has been unknown to our state in our lifetime. It is hard to talk about your father in such glowing terms, but I would like to quote others. Harry B. Miller, Jr., who started out practicing with my father, said he "was the best at cross-examination and final argument in front of the jury. We've never known a trial lawyer like John Young Brown". I ran into F. Lee Bailey one day, and when I asked whether he had ever heard of my father, he said, "Have I heard of John Y. Brown? He was the Clarence Darrow of the South." When you look at some the things he accomplished, I think you will agree.

He was a man unafraid to take on any challenge. I remember Dad and myself being in an elevator with Coach "Bear" Bryant after we lost the Tennessee game, 7 to 0, and we had been undefeated. Dad said to Coach Bryant, "Coach, I'll tell you what you did wrong." When you are that bold, I don't think you are afraid. I remember his first case before the U.S. Supreme Court. Justice Goldberg, was shuffling through papers and not paying attention. Dad said, "Justice Goldberg, I would appreciate it if you would put those papers down and listen to what I've got to say." There was some embarrassment, but you know something, you've got to be different sometimes in order to get attention. That's what a trial lawyer is: getting your message across, and that is the ultimate test of our law in this land.

I remember a case in West Liberty where the prosecution couldn't find the person who had been slain. My Dad represented the defendant charged with the slaying. Speaking to the jury, Dad said, "Let me tell you something about this fellow that they have said is missing. We have reason to believe that he is going to be here at 12 o'clock today. And I would suggest you all at 12 o'clock to watch that door. I suspect he is going to walk in here." Earlier, at court hour, he had told the jurors that they had to believe beyond a reasonable doubt. Well, every member of that jury was glued to that door about five minutes before noon. At 12 o'clock Dad said, "There you are. If you hadn't believed beyond a reasonable doubt, all of you would not have watched the door." And he got an acquittal. I think Bob Houlihan once said that John Young Brown was so passionate about the representation of a criminal defendant that he thought they ought to have a medal instead of a sentence.

Governor Edward Breathitt described my Father, John Young Brown, at his funeral some fourteen years ago. He said, "In his independence, he performed great public service. He raised issues that needed to be raised. He supported causes that needed to be supported. He asked questions that needed to be asked. He also supported unpopular causes and unpopular defendants in the courtroom believing that the law should protect as well as punish; that its protection is for all of us without regard for popular opinion or financial circumstances." And so my Father chose to be a pioneer. He chose to be a free spirit. He chose to be independent. He ran for public office all his life and I think if you look back over the course of his history since his birth, you can say that John Young Brown in many ways has had as much impact on political life and our lives in Kentucky as any one person. He was the first one to put forward the sales tax in Kentucky. Governor Breathitt will tell you he led the first fight for civil rights legislation in our state. He was the first one to go on television in a political campaign. He was the first to use a helicopter in his campaigns. He was a man in his own world, and he always looked for tomorrow. So today in accepting this award I say, as someone said when Lincoln passed, that all in all we should not look for his like again.

ROBERT F. HOULIHAN

*Remarks by Richard C. Stevenson
on the occasion of the induction of
Robert F. Houlihan into the Alumni
Hall of Fame of the University of
Kentucky College of Law*

It's a great pleasure and honor to be able to introduce Robert F. Houlihan, a person with whom I have practiced law for the last 27 years. Bob Houlihan is the senior partner of the law firm of Stoll, Keenon & Park where he has practiced law since 1946. After graduating from the UK College of Law in 1941, Bob, like many young men of his era, went off to fight in the war. He's fond of telling people that that's World War II and not the Civil War. After some very distinguished military service, Major Houlihan returned to Lexington to practice law. He practiced for a short period of time with Ed Prichard and Phil Ardery before joining the firm which would very shortly take the name of Stoll, Keenon & Park. Early on Bob specialized in the practice of labor and employment law. By the 1960's Bob was already recognized as one of the best management labor lawyers in the Midwest. As an indicator of the high regard in which he's held by labor and employment lawyers both locally and nationally, he was just notified within the last few days that he's been elected as a Fellow of the College of Labor and Employment Lawyers of the American Bar Association, only one of three Kentucky lawyers to ever be so honored. He's also previously been elected as a Fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers.

While Bob's contribution to the field of labor and employment law is well known to most Kentucky lawyers, at least the older Kentucky lawyers, what may not be so well known are some of Bob's contributions in other areas, in non-legal areas as well as legal areas. Bob was one of a handful of persons who decided in the early 1960's to purchase and restore the Shaker community of Pleasant Hill near Harrodsburg, a project which is ongoing and which has resulted at this time in the purchase of over 2700 acres of the original Shaker property and the complete restoration of 33 Shaker buildings. It is now the largest national historic landmark of its kind in the United States. He is a former director of the Bluegrass Trust for Historic Preservation, is a former president of the UK Library Associates, and currently is a member of its Executive Committee. He was a member of the ten-member delegation from the United States that was sent to observe the first multi-party election in the Yugoslavian Croatian Republic in April of 1990. He was a founding and is still an active member of the Kentucky Bar Association's Lawyers Helping Lawyers Committee for which he was awarded the Trusted Servant Award in 1996. He is a charter member of the KBA's Of Counsel Committee and former Chairman of that association's Senior Lawyer Section. He is a senior advisor to the Fayette County Bar Association, and that association awarded him the Henry T. Duncan Lifetime Achievement Award in 1996. He was awarded the Kentucky Bar Association's Bar Service Award in 1998. He has been a lifetime supporter of this law school and for a long period of time, among other things, served on its Board of Visitors.

One aspect of Bob's service which even those of us who were close associates and law partners didn't know about him was his World War II service. We knew that he had served, but we didn't really know what he did. Bob was a member of the Office of Strategic Services, or OSS as it is better known, the records of which were highly classified until just very recently. We would never have known what he did had his old unit not decided to honor him with a banquet in Lexington a couple of years ago right after the records of the unit had been declassified. What these records reveal is that Captain (later Major) Houlihan commanded an all Greek unit formerly known as Company C of the 2761st Special Reconnaissance Battalion of the OSS. It was one of the famous "operational groups" whose missions included intelligence collection and the arming, training, and leading of partisan groups in paramilitary commando operations behind the Nazi lines in Yugoslavia, Greece, and Italy. This unit was a fairly destructive bunch of folks. Comprised of only 169 men, to give you an idea of some of the damage they did, this was in Greece alone—they blew up 13 bridges, 11 locomotives, 72 trucks, 2 power plants, 3 pillboxes, 2 armored cars, 2 mineshafts, 1 artillery piece, 1 blockhouse, hundreds of boxcars and telegraph poles, and disabled thousands of miles of railroad tracks. Most of us would never have heard about this war record if the survivors of that unit hadn't had their banquet in his honor.

He's never been one to promote or even talk about himself so it's altogether fitting that he be honored here tonight for this life of service. Would you please join us in honoring Robert F. Houlihan as a new member of the College of Law Alumni Hall of Fame.

JANET L. STUMBO

Remarks by Allison Connelly on the occasion of the induction of Justice Janet L. Stumbo into the Alumni Hall of Fame of the University of Kentucky College of Law

Tonight I have the pleasure of sharing with you the journey of a coal miner's daughter to a seat on the Kentucky Supreme Court. It is quite a journey. Justice Janet Stumbo is a native of Floyd County and a coal miner's daughter. She graduated from Belfry High School and Morehead State University. In 1980 she obtained her law degree from the University of Kentucky College of Law. She must have known that she was going to be in the court system because her first job out of law school was as a staff attorney for the Kentucky Court of Appeals. She left the Court of Appeals in 1982 and entered private practice with the Prestonsburg firm of Turner, Paul and Stumbo.

Justice Stumbo has always been a person of the people, and her private practice reflected that fact. Ever the public servant, she became an Assistant County Attorney for Floyd County for three years. For many years she demonstrated her personal concern for individuals who have the misfortune of living in poverty by sitting on the Board of Directors of the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund, a civil legal services organization that serves the 18 poorest counties in Eastern Kentucky. In 1989 Justice Stumbo became a partner in the law firm of Stumbo, DeRossett and Pillersdorf. Now, she was already a partner with Ned Pillersdorf because he is her husband. Still she didn't stay with the law firm too long because in that same year she became only the second woman in Kentucky history to serve on Kentucky Court of Appeals.

As the first woman to be elected to the Court of Appeals from the 7th Judicial District, her 1989 race is symbolic of Justice Stumbo's grit, determination and leadership. In a spirited race in which she was the underdog, and in which she was criticized because she did not take her husband's last name, Justice Stumbo won with the slogan "She won't be one of the boys." Two years later, Justice Stumbo was elected, without opposition, to a full eight year term on the Court of Appeals. Yet this coal miner's daughter had greater dreams.

In 1993 Justice Stumbo became the first woman elected by the people to the Kentucky Supreme Court. In 1996, she was elected without opposition to a full eight year term on that court. This lack of opposition in a highly political district is all the more remarkable because she is a woman.

Justice Stumbo has repeatedly been recognized as a role model for women throughout the Commonwealth. Somehow, she has successfully juggled her professional life with her life as a devoted mother and spouse. She received the Justice Award from the KY Women Advocates in 1991, the Women in State Government Network's, the Bull's Eye Award in 1995, the first Women's Achievement Award given by the Kentucky Bar Association for Women in 1996. This award not only recognized Justice Stumbo's professional excellence in the practice of law, but also recognized she had opened up the field for other women to seek political office; to not be afraid of reaching for the stars; and to not be just one of the boys.

Justice Stumbo's career is marked by excellence. She was a caring practicing attorney. She is now an excellent jurist as evidenced by her output of legal opinions and decisions. However, as her husband Ned would point out, her greatest decisions were to have her three daughters, Nancy, Sarah, and Samantha. In short, I would have to say Justice Stumbo, "You are a role model for all people. You are a mother, a spouse and a woman who has never forgotten your roots and the poverty of your district. You've never lost that approachability and that common touch." And as you ended every campaign speech, you used to tell us that this coal miner's daughter, if elected, would do her best to make you proud. Well, you've made us all proud. So I ask you join us in honoring her in her induction to the UK College of Law Alumni Hall of Fame.

UK College of Law Alumni Hall of Fame Criteria and Nomination Form

Nominations are now being accepted for the UK College of Law's Alumni Hall of Fame. This program will honor alumni annually, and inductions will take place at the College's awards banquet during the KBA convention in June. All nominations will be carefully considered by the Board of Directors of the Law Alumni Association. Please consider the following criteria when nominating an alumnus or alumna.

A. Candidates must have earned a law degree from the University of Kentucky not less than 10 years prior to consideration. Candidates may not be active board members of the Law Alumni Association, and cannot at the time of nomination or selection be the holder of an elected partisan political office.

B. To be selected for the Hall of Fame, a candidate must meet the following criteria:

*Candidate must have reached and remained at the pinnacle of his or her field for a period of time sufficient to demonstrate perseverance and maturation and/or must have affected a profound positive influence on the College of Law in the years since his or her graduation.

*Professional success and significant contributions must be recognized by his or her peers as having reached and remained at the pinnacle of his or her field and/or having a profound positive influence on the College of Law.

*Professional success and significant contributions to a specialty are not achievement enough to warrant selection to the Alumni Hall of Fame.

C. The honor of Hall of Fame selection is not given so much in recognition of an office or position held, but rather for the actual merit of the individual's work in his or her chosen field of endeavor and professional leadership. Candidates must have exhibited a high degree of character and integrity.

D. Evidence for meeting the above criteria can come from detailed information about the candidate's credentials, achievements, the impact and implications of those accomplishments, public awards and honors, and outside sources such as published articles and previously aired video or audio tapes. The selection committee considers all information included with nominations in making its decisions.

E. All candidates, living and deceased, will be considered regardless of race, gender or religion.

2000 College of Law Alumni Hall of Fame Call for Nominations

The Alumni Hall of Fame is the highest recognition presented by the UK Law Alumni Association. It shall be awarded with great care to alumni who have distinguished themselves by contributions that they have made in their own particular field of work, or in the betterment of humanity.

New Scholarship Programs

John Y. Brown, Sr. Scholarship

Former Governor John Y. Brown, Jr. has created a scholarship in honor of his father. This scholarship, which covers in-state tuition plus the cost of books, will be awarded next year to an entering student who has an aptitude and interest in pursuing a career as a criminal trial attorney. The student will receive the scholarship for three years, after which it will be awarded to another entering student.

Burbank and Collins Scholarship

Virginia Collins Burbank and her daughter, Wynter Reneaux Collins, have created a scholarship to be given to a member of a group historically under-represented in the practice of law. The recipient will be someone who demonstrates the personal characteristics that will likely result in involvement and leadership in the community and profession in Kentucky, is believed to have strong ethical standards and a knowledge of the time and commitment a career in law requires, and will likely not leave the law after three to five years. The scholarship was created to honor Ms. Anne Woods Varble, Dr. Mary Osborne, and Ms. Dianne McKaig, who were Ms. Burbank's friends and colleagues in law school and sorority sisters. The inaugural recipient of the Burbank and Collins Scholarship is third-year student Ruth Lerner of Louisville, Kentucky. She is a graduate of the State University of New York—Stony Brook. Ms. Lerner resides in Louisville with her family and continues to commute to the College.

Savage Garmer & Elliot Trial Advocacy Awards

The Lexington law firm of Savage Garmer & Elliott created these awards to be used annually as a loan forgiveness program for the top competitors in the College's trial advocacy program and who are completing their third year in law school. The first recipient is Lisa Wilson of San Antonio, Texas. She is a graduate of Trinity University and has returned to Texas to practice law. The second recipient is Wes Browne of Brighton, Michigan. He graduated from Albion College and will practice law in Lexington, Kentucky.

McCoy & West Trial Advocacy Award

This award is given by the Lexington law firm of McCoy and West. It will be used annually as a loan forgiveness program for one of the top competitors in the College's trial advocacy program who is completing his or her third year in law school. The first recipient is Angela Mullins of Whitesburg, Kentucky. She is a graduate of Eastern Kentucky University and will practice in Lexington, Kentucky.

New Professorships

The College is pleased to announce the establishment of two new professorships in honor of two past deans—the Thomas P. Lewis Professorship and the Robert G. Lawson Professorship. The gifts creating these professorships were eligible for a match by the Research Challenge Trust Fund.

Thomas P. Lewis became Professor Emeritus in 1998 upon his retirement from teaching. He graduated from the College of Law in 1954 and received his S.J.D. degree from Harvard Law School. He began teaching at the College of Law in 1957, and served as Dean of the College from 1976 to 1982. The endowed professorship created in his honor will support the work of a distinguished member or members of the UK College of Law faculty. The first recipient of the Thomas P. Lewis Professorship is John Marshall Rogers.

John G. Prather, Jr. initiated the establishment of the Robert G. Lawson Professorship with the support of several alumni, including Steve Beshear, Marshall Eldred, Joseph Goeke, Richard Siegel and John Famularo. Robert G. Lawson received his J.D. Degree from the University of Kentucky in 1963. He has been a faculty member of the College of Law since 1966, with two periods of service as Dean – 1971-73 and 1982-88. He received the University of Kentucky Great Teacher Award in 1971. The professorship will support the work of a distinguished member of the faculty who teaches evidence and/or litigation-related courses. The first recipient of the Robert G. Lawson Professorship is William H. Fortune.

Dean's Circle

The University of Kentucky College of Law gratefully acknowledges the 1999 members of the Dean's Circle. Membership in the Dean's Circle occurs when a firm with five or more UK Law graduates presents a 100% participation standard within the firm. These 10 firms are indeed some of the College's most valued supporters.

Lafferty Society

The Lafferty Society is the College of Law's recognition group and an important part of UK's Fellows program. Membership in the Lafferty Society is gained when gifts and pledges of at least $10,000 for individuals and $50,000 for organizations are designated for the use of the College. Bequests, insurance policies and trust agreements that benefit the College of Law in an amount of no less than $50,000 also qualify individuals for membership. If you are already a UK Fellow, membership in the College of Law's Lafferty Society occurs when an additional commitment of at least $5,000 is given for the use of the College. For more information, please contact Linda B. Talbott at 606-257-3208.

Professorships Awarded for 1999-2000 Academic Year

Top quality faculty are at the heart of the educational process. Our faculty establishes and maintains the College's academic standards. Their research expands and improves the knowledge base of the legal profession. Professorships are vital to the UK College of Law because they provide the resources that enable the College's historically low salaries to be more competitive with those of our benchmark institutions.

Professorships enable the College to recruit and retain an outstanding faculty and are therefore a priority in our fund raising endeavors.

We would like to thank the individuals, firms, foundations and companies listed below that have made these professorships possible and to congratulate our faculty for a job well done.

Dear Law Alumni,

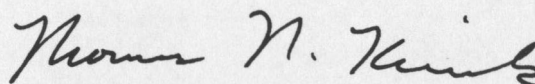

It has been a fantastic year for our UK College of Law. In the March 29, 1999 edition of U.S. News and World Report, our law school was ranked in the top 50 law schools of America! Even more impressive is the fact that we are in the top 27 public law schools in America! As I have continued to emphasize in my letters to you over the last year, "the old law school continues to make the alumni look great."

Our Law Alumni Association also just completed a successful year, and we are looking forward to another outstanding year as we enter a new century. Our membership continues to rise. Thanks to the support of our members, we were able to sponsor such events as the Awards Banquet at the KBA convention, a picnic for the first-year students, and a tent party for football homecoming. We are also working with the College to host more events for our graduates outside of Kentucky.

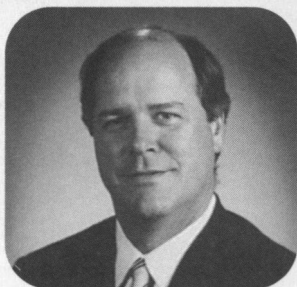

I am proud to report that the College and the Alumni Board have taken steps to develop a marketing, or branding, strategy for the College. Our Alumni Association will underwrite a portion of the costs associated with this endeavor. We felt that the College needed to develop an image and branding strategy for its collateral materials, publications and web site. Currently, the College produces a variety of materials, all with a different look and message. Through this effort, the College plans to develop a strategy and theme that will be applied to all the publications and that will reinforce its image as one of the top public law schools in the country.

Our Alumni Association provides essential assistance to the College, not only in hosting events for graduates but also in enabling the College to undertake important projects that it could not otherwise have afforded. If you have not joined the law Alumni Association, please take two minutes to complete the form on the next page and mail it along with a check. Your support truly makes a difference!

Very Truly Yours,

Thomas N. Kerrick '80
President

Career Services Employment Survey Results

The Career Services Office of the University of Kentucky College of Law tracks employment and salary information from its law school graduates on an annual basis. This information is used to assist current students and alumni with job searches and hiring decisions.

Favorable National Rankings—The information received is also reported to the National Association for Law Placement and U.S. News & World Report. The rankings assigned to the University of Kentucky College of Law by U.S. News and World Report based on the Class of 1998 data were very favorable. Of the 178 private and public accredited law schools, the UK College of Law was tied for 7th in the country based on the percentage of graduates employed within nine months of graduation.

Salary Survey—The salary information gathered by the law school is used to compile the annual Salary Survey for recent graduates. Starting salary information is broken down by geographic area, size of firm, and type of employer.

Class of 1999 Recognition Ceremony

The UK College of Law held its 90th Commencement Ceremony, or "Law Recognition Ceremony," in the Concert Hall of the Singletary Center for the Arts on the afternoon of Friday, May 7, 1999.

After the processional across the stage, Acting Dean Robert G. Schwemm congratulated the graduates, as well as their parents, spouses, children, grandparents, and in-laws in the audience who had supported them during the graduates' three years of law school. By tradition, the ceremony included three speakers: the student ranked first in the class, a faculty member selected by vote of the graduating class, and the current president of the Kentucky Bar Association speaking on behalf of the bar.

Susan David Dwyer spoke on behalf of the 1999 graduating class. To extend greetings of the faculty, the Class of 1999 elected Clinical Professor Allison Connelly, Class of 1983. Richard H. C. Clay, Class of 1977, President of the Kentucky Bar Association, addressed the graduates on behalf of the bar; he is a partner in the firm of Woodward, Hobson and Fulton.

Each year the UK College of Law faculty presents an engraved sterling silver julep cup to the graduating student who has made the law school a more interesting place in which to teach and a more pleasant place for students. Two students—Susan Dwyer and Earl F. (Chip) Hamm, Jr.—shared the Faculty Cup Award for 1999.

Ms. Dwyer is a Bert Combs Scholar who received her undergraduate degree from Penn State University and has a Masters Degree from the University of Kentucky. Following graduation, she will clerk for Judge David Nelson of the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals. At the ceremony she was described as a brilliant, energetic student who was always a willing participant in class. In addition to her superlative academic performance, she served as the editor of the Kentucky Law Journal ethics symposium, as an active member of the Women's Law Caucus, and as the student member of the 1998-1999 dean search committee.

Mr. Hamm is from Flemingsburg, Kentucky, and came to the College as a James Park, Sr. Scholar. He is a graduate of Duke University and holds a Masters in Public Policy from the University of Michigan. At the College he was a solid student who did a great deal to foster strong faculty/student relations. He was active in virtually every phase of law school life, from the Kentucky Law Journal to the Honor Council to the Student Bar Association, where he served as President. Mr. Hamm will be an associate with the Louisville office of Woodward, Hobson and Fulton.

Richard C. Ausness, Professor of Law, spoke at a symposium on products liability in February, 1999, sponsored by the Salmon P. Chase College of Law. This resulted in the publication of an article entitled, "When Warnings Alone Won't Do: A Reply to Professor Phillips," which appeared in 26 Northern Kentucky Law Review 627 (1999). Another article, co-authored with Florida State University law professor Paul LeBel, entitled "Toward Justice in Tobacco Policymaking: A Critique of Hanson and Logus and An Alternative Approach to the Costs of Cigarettes," was published as part of a symposium on tobacco policy in 33 Georgia Law Review— (1999). Professor Ausness also received the College of Law's Robert M. and Joanne K. Duncan Faculty Teaching Award for teaching excellence this academic year. Finally, Professor Ausness was interviewed this spring on National Public Radio's "Morning Edition" program. The radio broadcast discussed some of the lawsuits that grew out of the 1997 shooting at Heath High School in Paducah.

Drusilla V. Bakert, Associate Dean, has been appointed to the Test Development and Research Committee of the Law School Admissions Council. This is a committee of law school deans, faculty and admissions professionals who will consider issues relating to the LSAT, including the possible computerization of the test in the future.

John Batt, Professor of Law, is a consultant to the Yale Press. He is also a member of the Yale Law Science and Policy Institute. Professor Batt continues to act as a jury consultant in numerous cases. He is the author of "Modern Scientific Jury Selection," which was published by the ALI and ABA in 1983.

Carolyn S. Bratt, Professor of Law, is the Ralph S. Petrilli Distinguished Visiting Professor of Law at the University of Louisville Louis D. Brandeis School of Law, for the 1999-2000 academic year. Professor Bratt developed and moderated a program for the 1999 Annual Meeting of the American Bar Association on "The ABC's of Remedying Sexual Orientation Discrimination Against Students in America's Public Schools." She has been invited to organize a workshop on "Sexual Harassment, Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault in the Workplace" as part of the Governor's October, 1999 conference "Ending Sexual Assault and Domestic Violence: A Blueprint for Peace."

Herb Cihak, Professor of Law, Director of the Law Library, Director of Legal Research and Writing, and Chief Information Officer for the College of Law, made a July 1998 presentation at the American Association of Law Libraries Annual Meeting in Anaheim entitled, "Leadership, Liberation and Law Libraries: What's on the Horizon?" He spoke at the Fall 1998 KLA/KSMA Conference on the topic "Coaching the Non-Librarian: Do We Know Who Is Pitching and Catching?" He has written several recent articles. "The School of Law Library" was published in the Summer 1998 issue of Legal History and Rare Books. Library Mosaics published his article titled, "Coaching Library Support Staff-The 3 R's That Count," in May 1999.

Allison Connelly, Assistant Professor and Director of the Legal Clinic, reports that forty third-year clinic students have represented over 230 low income individuals on a variety of civil matters since the Clinic began in 1997. Through IOLTA and Kentucky Bar Foundation grants, Professor Connelly has also updated and revised the KBA's popular handbook, "Laws and Programs for Older Kentuckians," which is scheduled for publication in November, 1999. Professor Connelly remains a contributing author and editor of Baldwin's Kentucky Practice, Vol. 2, "Criminal Practice," which is updated yearly. As faculty advisor to the Trial Advocacy Board, Professor Connelly coached the National Mock Trial Team to its second straight Sixth Circuit Regional Mock Trial Championship. She is also the founder of the Kentucky Mock Trial Tournament where students from all three Kentucky law schools compete for the state mock trial championship. The inaugural competition will occur in Lexington in November, 1999. Professor Connelly serves as Chair of the Lexington-Fayette Urban County Government Ethics Committee and is also Chair of the KBA's Elder Law Committee. She continues her pro bono representation of indigent inmates and is currently drafting a model Power of Attorney statute on behalf of the Fayette County Senior Protection Project for consideration before the 2000 General Assembly.

Mary J. Davis, Professor of Law, will co-author a treatise on products liability law to be published by West Publishing Co. in 2000. The treatise is titled Madden, Owen and Davis, Products Liability (2d ed. 2000), and will comprise three volumes. Professor Davis continues to work with the authors of Products Liability and Safety (3d ed. 1996), a law school casebook, and has recently completed the 1999 Case and Statutory Supplement. She is working on an article on consumer product safety regulation and plans to complete it by Spring 2000. She recently completed a semester as visiting professor at Wake Forest University School of Law where she taught Torts and Remedies.

Todd E. Eberle, Associate Dean and Director of Continuing Legal Education, has been re-appointed chair of the Association for Continuing Legal Education's Law School Section for 1999-2000. He has also had a series of articles on the law of continuing legal education published in the Quarterly Newsletter of the Association for Continuing Legal Education: "Comment at CLE Program Admitted As Evidence In Legal Malpractice," Vol. XIX, No. 3 (Fall 1998); "A Lawyer At CLE, A Lawyer At Work?" Vol. XIX, No. 4 (Winter 1999); and "CLE and the Presumption of Lawyer Competence," Vol. XX, No. 2 (Summer 1999). Todd continues to serve on the Board of Directors of Central Kentucky Legal Services, and the Appalachian Research and Defense Fund of Kentucky.

William H. Fortune, Edward T. Breathitt Professor of Law, co-authored a book with Professor Rick Underwood and Professor Ed Imwinkelried (University of California-Davis) entitled Modern Litigation and Professional Responsibility Handbook, which was published in 1996. He co-authored the fourth edition of Psychology and the Legal System with the Dean of the UK Graduate School, Professor Mike Nietzel, and Professor Larry Wrightsman (University of Kansas), published in 1997. He also co-authored Kentucky Criminal Law with Professor Robert Lawson, which was published in 1998. In 1999, he wrote an article titled, "A Proposal to Require Lawyers to Disclose Information About Procedural Matters," for the Kentucky Law Journal. He made CLE presentations for the Kentucky Bar Association, UKCLE and the Attorney General and the Louisville Bar Association. He continues his mediation work with the Mediation Center of Kentucky.

Christopher W. Frost, Professor of Law, published "The Art of the Possible: Healthcare Policy, Bankruptcy Policy and the Bankruptcy Sale of Healthcare Facilities" in the 1999-2000 issue of the Annual Survey of Bankruptcy Law; "Are You Really Disinterested? Chapter 11 Presents Real Problems in Ethics", in the October/November issue of Business Law Today; "A Feast for Credit Card Companies," in the October 5, 1998 issue of the Lexington Herald-Leader; and "Healthcare Financing In Bankruptcy: Sales or Liens? Where You Stand Depends on Where You Sit," in the California Bankruptcy Journal. He spoke on bankruptcy ethics at a luncheon meeting of the Turnaround Management Association in St. Louis, Missouri, in March, on bankruptcy reform and bankruptcy ethics at the U.K. Consumer Bankruptcy Institute in December, 1998, and on Health Care Bankruptcies at a Symposium on the Interface of Health Law and Chapter 11 on the Bankruptcy Code at Seton Hall University in April, 1998. Professor Frost is currently serving on the drafting committee considering revision of Article 9 in Kentucky and is Chair of the Law Dean Search Committee.

Eugene R. Gaetke, Professor of Law, has been appointed Acting Dean of the College of Law for 1999-2000. His article entitled "Renewed Introspection and the Legal Profession" was recently published as the Foreword to the Kentucky Law Journal's symposium issue on "Litigating Zealously Within the Bounds of the Law."

Alvin L. Goldman, Professor of Law, continues to be a member of the Editorial Advisory Board of Comparative Labor Law & Policy Journal, Vice Chair of the U.S. Branch of the International Society for Labor Law and Social Security, and a member of the Advisory Board for the International Encyclopedia of Laws. As co-reporter for the U.S., Professor Goldman recently selected, edited and prepared his annual contribution of case commentaries representing significant developments in U.S. labor and employment case law to be published in International Labour Law Reports. He continues to collaborate with Professor Jacques Rojot, Dean of the Business School at the Sorbonne (Paris I), in preparing a book that will combine and revise their respective books on negotiations. In addition, in June 1999, he presented the annual Benjamin Aaron lecture on Labor and Employment Law at UCLA and on September 14, 1999, he presided over the concluding panel for the inauguration of the Carr Professorship at the Indiana University School of Law. Professor Goldman attended the World Congress of the International Industrial Relations Association in Bologna in October 1998, where he presented a workshop paper on the impact of culture upon negotiations. He also attended the mid-year meeting of the National Academy of Arbitrators in Kansas City in October 1998 and the Academy's annual meeting in New Orleans in May 1999.

Darlene C. Goring, Assistant Professor of Law, published an article entitled "Affirmative Action and the First Amendment: The Attainment of a Diverse Student Body Is A Permissible Exercise of Institutional Autonomy," in the University of Kansas Law Review. She recently completed work on an article entitled "Private Problem, Public Solution: Affirmative Action in the 21st Century." During Fall 1998, she presented a lecture entitled "Race, Neutrality, and the Constitution: Color Blind or Just Blind" as part of the African American Studies and Research Program Carter G. Woodson Lecture Series. Professor Goring continues her work as faculty advisor to Phi Delta Phi legal fraternity, which received the International Inn of the year award during the 1998-99 school year. Professor Goring also coached the American Association of Trial Lawyer's Student Team to the quarter-final round of the 1999 competition for the second consecutive year.

Louise Graham, Professor of Law, has published the 1999 Supplement to Kentucky Practice, Volumes 15 & 16 on Domestic Relations. On October 20, 1999, Professor Graham will be a presenter at the Kentucky Domestic Violence Conference in Louisville, Kentucky. One presentation is called "Civil Litigation Between Spouses," and involves a discussion of tort suits arising out of domestic violence, including aspects of the Gender Motivated Violence Act section of the federal Violence Against Women Act. The other presentation is on Child Custody in the context of Domestic Violence. On May 12, 1999, Professor Graham testified before the Special Task Force on Parenting and Custody with regard to the legislature's desire to establish a presumption for joint custody. Her testimony covered the divorce process but focused on custody and support issues. Professor Graham is a member of the Governor's Task Force on Guardian Ad Litem, a group studying ways to improve the dependency and neglect process for children.

Roberta M. Harding, Professor of Law, published an article comparing the rights of prisoners in the United States and Europe in the University of Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law. She completed an article exploring capital punishment's relationship to human sacrifice that she began researching and writing while she was a Visiting Scholar at the University of Oxford's Centre for Criminological Research. Presently she is conducting research for an article identifying several superstitions associated with capital punishment, such as the belief that touching the body of a recently executed person had curative benefits, and tracing origins and establishing their purpose in past society. In the Spring of 1999, she was a Visiting Associate Professor of Law at the University of Georgia School of Law where she taught Remedies and Capital Punishment. Professor Harding continues to administer the College of Law's faculty exchange program with Coventry University's School of Law in England. She also remains active in student recruitment. Recently she was asked to be the first American member of Association Francaise de Criminologie, a French criminological society based in Paris, France. Professor Harding has remained active consulting on local and national death penalty cases. She also remains committed to being involved with Kentucky's youth by meeting with Governor's Scholars' students at Centre College who were taking a class on the theories of punishment and by speaking about being a law professor and a lawyer to grade school children participating in a Journalism Summer Camp.

Michael P. Healy, Professor of Law, has recently published two articles. His article entitled, "England's Contaminated Land Act of 1995: Perspectives on America's Approach to Hazardous Substance Cleanups and Evolving Principles of International Law," was published in the Brownfields Symposium issue of the College's Journal of Natural Resources & Environmental Law. Professor Healy's article entitled, "Legislative Intent and Statutory Interpretation in England and the United States: An Assessment of the Impact of Pepper v. Hart," is being published in the Stanford Journal of International Law. Professor Healy has also written a book review of Policy Making in an Era of Global Environmental Change (edited by R.E. Munn, J.W.M. la Riviere and N. van Lookeren Campagne) (1996), which is being published in the Asia Pacific Journal of Environmental Law. Professor Healy is currently working on an article entitled, "The Lessons of an Ancient Canon: The Changing Attitudes Toward and Contours of the Communis Opinio Canon." During the 1998-1999 academic year, Professor Healy was Chair of the Dean Search and Screening Committee.

Dean Search Continues

Committed to locating an excellent person of national stature and confident of the past and current leadership of Acting Deans Schwemm and Gaetke, the College of Law has decided to continue its national search for a Dean. Chancellor Zinser has reappointed last year's Dean Search Committee, expressing confidence in that group and in the prospect for a successful conclusion to the search. Professor Healy has passed the Chair of the committee to Professor Frost, but has agreed to remain on the committee.

The committee includes seven faculty members (Professors Ausness, Campbell, Cihak, Frost, Harding, Healy, and Moore), three law alumni members (Judge Jennifer Coffman, Chaz Lavell, and Ron Walker), one non-law faculty member (Dean Emery Wilson of the Medical Center), one law staff member (Alma Mitchell), and one law student member (Stephanie Bush Miller).

The committee has announced and publicized the Dean Search by sending information about the University, the College, and the position to every law school and by placing advertisements in several journals of national circulation. The committee is now actively soliciting applications from a diverse array of outstanding candidates nominated by leaders of the bench, the bar and the academy. We have received numerous applications and have begun the task of screening the applicants.

The growing national reputation of the law school and the completion of the law school's strategic plan, self study, ABA site inspection, and University Review are all cause for confidence that this year's Dean Search will conclude with a leader who will continue to strengthen the College's reputation and record of achievement.

Robert G. Lawson, Professor of Law, published an article, "Interpretation of the Kentucky Rules of Evidence—What Happened to the Common Law?," in the Kentucky Law Journal and received for that work the Charles S. Cassis Research Award for academic year 1998-99. He recently lectured on this subject and other evidence topics for the UK Continuing Legal Education Program. He also published a supplement to his book on Kentucky evidence law and is currently working on an article dealing with difficult and important issues concerning amendment of Kentucky's Rules of Evidence. Professor Lawson was recently the recipient of the "Kentucky Lawyer Award" granted annually by the Kentucky Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers and was presented with a "public advocate award" for services on behalf of the Department of Public Advocacy. He was especially honored in 1999 when a group of his former students provided the funds needed to create the Robert G. Lawson Professorship Endowment in the College of Law.

Douglas C. Michael, Professor of Law, is beginning research on regulation of the Internet, to be completed on sabbatical next year. In Spring 2000, Professor Michael will be at the University of Florida as a Visiting Professor. He will teach corporation and banking law. He continues to be the instructor for the IRS's Volunteer Tax Assistance Program.

Kathryn L. Moore, Associate Professor of Law, recently completed work on an article entitled "Partial Privatization of Social Security: Its Impact on At-Risk Populations." Her article, "Redistribution Under a Partially Privatized Social Security System," was published in Brooklyn Law Review's Symposium: Getting Ready for Individually Managed Pensions: A Global Perspective. She is currently working on an article that examines how a variety of social security reform proposals would likely affect the benefits of women, minorities, and lower-income workers.

Dr. Lois Nora, M.D., J.D., Associate Dean of the College of Medicine, has a joint appointment to our Law Faculty. She taught Legal Medicine with Professor Underwood in the Spring of 1999. She recently received a prestigious Ace fellowship for the 1999-2000 school year. In that connection she will be working with President William Kirwan at the Ohio State University.

John M. Rogers, Professor of Law, has returned to the College of Law from his one year as Visiting Professor of Constitutional Law at the University of San Diego. His book, International Law and United States Law (Ashgate Publishing, 1999), was released in August. The volume identifies, explains, and justifies the generally accepted role of public international law in the application of United States law by United States courts. In June, Professor Rogers spoke at Zhongshan University in Guangzhou, China, on "The Significance of the Commerce Clause in U.S. Constitutional Law." In Beijing later that month, he attended the 10-year reunion of students he had taught as a Fulbright Professor there in 1987-88.

Paul Salamanca, Associate Professor of Law, is at work on an article entitled, "Can a State Officer Simultaneously Violate State Law and Due Process?" His most recent article, entitled "Some Realistic Thinking About Secular Effects," will be published shortly in the New Mexico Law Review. This past summer, he delivered a paper entitled "Is There Any Way to Make Sense Out of Zinerman v. Burch?" at the annual meeting of the Southeastern Conference of the Association of American Law Schools.

Robert G. Schwemm, served as the Acting Dean of the College of Law in 1998-99. The ninth annual supplement to Professor Schwemm's book, Housing Discrimination: Law and Litigation (West Group), was published this fall. During the past year he gave speeches on fair housing and lending discrimination in Washington, Chicago, Nashville, Toledo, and St. Louis. In June 1999, he was moderator-facilitator for the eleventh straight year at the annual convention of the National Fair Housing Alliance.

Thomas J. Stipanowich, Professor of Law, recently was appointed the first Hewlett Professor of the CPR Institute for Dispute Resolution in New York and the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation, and continues as Director of CPR's National Commission on the Future of Arbitration. Along with fulfilling Board of Director responsibilities for the American Arbitration Association, he has been appointed Chair of their Academic Advisory Committee of the International Global Research Institute. He continues to serve as Academic Advisor to the National Conference of Commissioners on State Laws Drafting Committee to reform the Uniform Arbitration Act; as a public member of the Securities Industry Conference on Arbitration (SICA); member of the ABA Section of Dispute Resolution; member of the CPR Commission on Ethics and Standards of Dispute Resolution practice. He was recently named an Honorary Member of the American College of Civil Trial Mediators; and an Honorary Master of the Inn, Justice Marie L. Garibaldi American Inn of Court for Alternative Dispute Resolution.

Publications: His article, "Behind the Neutral: A Look at Provider Issues", appeared in ADR Currents, December 1998. Other articles include "A Systematic, Dynamic Approach to Conflict Management", ADR Report, September 30, 1999; "Protecting Consumers: The Consumer Due Process Protocol", Dispute Resolution Magazine, Fall 1998; "Resolving Consumer Disputes: Due Process Protocol Protects Consumer Rights", Dispute Resolution Journal, August 1998.

Speeches and presentations: Speech, "Five Questions for the Contract Teacher" at the Association of American Law Schools Conference on Contracts, June 26, 1999 in Washington, D.C.; "Emerging Alternatives in Conflict Management," Cornell University School of Industrial and Labor Relations, Ithaca, April 22, 1999; "Consumer Defenses to Arbitration Agreements," Practising Law Institute in New York, February 22, 1999; "The Multi-Door Contract," American College of Construction Lawyers, February 20, 1999; Keynote speaker, "The Future of Commercial Arbitration: Five Predictions," ABA Section of Dispute Resolution, Los Angeles, February 6, 1999; "The Multi-Door Contract—ADR's Alternative to the Multi-Door Courthouse," The ADR Superconference, Forbes Magazine and the American Corporate Counsel Association, New York, October 9, 1999; Moderated "Arbitration: A Primer for Advocates: A Lawyer's Guide to Arbitration," ABA Annual Meeting, Atlanta, GA., Aug. 9, 1999 and three other programs at the first annual ABA Section of Dispute Resolution conference in Boston in April; Panelist, "Corporate ADR and the Promise of Partnering," ABA Section of Business Law Spring Meeting, San Francisco, April 1999; "Insiders' Update on the Proposed Revision of the UAA," Cincinnati, OH, December 8, 1998; Co-Chair of "Arbitration: Preparing for the 21st Century" Conference and Moderator "Emerging Standards in Arbitration," ABA Section of Dispute Resolution and the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, New York, September 24-25, 1998.

Richard H. Underwood, Professor of Law, published an article entitled "The Professional And The Liar," in the Kentucky Law Journal's Professional Responsibility Symposium (Summer 1999). This article was an expanded version of a paper presented at Gray's Inn, London, England, in December 1998, as part of the World-Wide Advocacy Conference sponsored by the Inns of Court School of Law. Professor Underwood also published a 1999-2000 edition of the supplement to Modern Litigation And Professional Responsibility Handbook (Aspen); and published a new edition of his evidence text, The 1999-2000 Kentucky Evidence Courtroom Manual (Anderson). During the summer of 1999, he completed a paper on the evaluation of scientific evidence, which will be presented in December 1999, at the Second World Conference on New Trends In Criminal Investigation and Evidence, Amsterdam, The Netherlands. This paper will also be used in his new seminar (Fall 1999) styled Scientific Evidence and Forensics. During the 1998-1999 school year, Professor Underwood was interviewed on BBC Radio regarding legal ethics in criminal defense cases. He was also quoted in the impeachment proceedings before the House; and cited as an expert on the law of perjury in stories carried by the New York Times.

Stephen Vasek, Associate Professor of Law, taught CLE workshops with Mike Reynolds in Lexington and Louisville on Fiduciary Income Tax Returns. In March he participated as an arbitrator and team coach for the U.K. College of Law team competing in the Wilem C. Vis International Arbitration Moot in Vienna, Austria. He was also the advisor and coach for the College of Law team participating in the Jessup International Law Moot Court Competition. In August he taught workshops on Estate and Gift Taxation with William Rigsby in Lexington and Louisville.

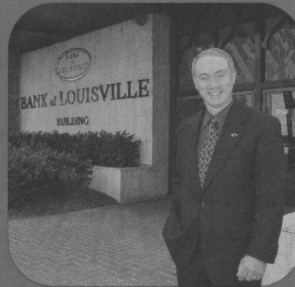

Harold R. Weinberg, Professor of Law, chaired the College of Law's Self-Study Committee charged with preparing a report to the American Bar Association for use in the A.B.A.'s accreditation reinspection of the College. (The other Committee members were Professors Davis, Graham, Michael, Salamanca, and Welling.) The Self-Study process, which began in the Fall of 1997, required the Committee to critically evaluate the College's finances, academic program, student body, faculty, library, and physical plant. The A.B.A.'s Site-Evaluation Team inspected the College in April, 1999; at which time it congratulated the Committee on the excellence of its work. Last year the American Law Institute and the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws promulgated a revised secured transactions article for the Uniform Commercial Code. Among many changes, the new Article Nine incorporates commercial tort claims as collateral subject to security interests. In a 1975 article in the Kentucky Law Journal, Professor Weinberg was the first scholar to extensively analyze tort claims as secured transactions collateral. More recently, he served as the Special Advisor to the Article Nine Study Committee concerning this subject. He also served on a task force that advised the Study Committee concerning security interests in intellectual property (e.g., patents, copyrights, trademarks, and trade secrets). The revised Article Nine may be considered by the 2000 Kentucky General Assembly.

Sarah N. Welling, Professor of Law, completed the first annual supplement for Federal Criminal Law and Related Actions: Crimes, Forfeiture, the False Claims Act and RICO. During the spring of 1999, she consulted as an expert on money laundering for a Mexican bank indicted in the federal prosecution known as Casablanca. She was appointed to the organizing committee for the American Association of Law Schools, Criminal Justice Section conference to be held in June, 2000.

Richard Westin, Professor of Law, published an article in the 1999 Kentucky Bar Journal entitled, "Responding to IRS Requests to Computer Information." He also published the article "Anderson v. Commissioner: Judicial Contempt for Offshore Asset Protection Trusts" in Tax Notes International (August 1999). Professor Westin also published an article entitled "Noncompliant Foreign Trusts" (with Axten), which has been published by J. Asset Protection in August 1999. He has edited the 2nd edition of Federal Income Taxation of Business Enterprises, with J. McNulty (Berkeley) and R. Beck (New York) (1995) and the 1999-2000 version of the Warren, Gorham & Lamont Tax Dictionary. The dictionary is to be published in hard copy and as part of a ROM disk. In May 1999, Professor Westin gave a talk at the ABA Tax Section meeting on Controlled Foreign Corporations. A book he co-authored for Matthews Bender entitled Brownfield's Law and Practice was declared "Law Book of the Year" by a panel of New York publishers.

Message from the Chairman

The University of Kentucky College of Law has come so far, so quickly because of its fundamental values, belief in service and the desire to do everything well, in an environment where teaching and learning complement discovery and research. As a result the College is being recognized as among the nation's best. What is truly impressive about these accomplishments is the fact that this success has been achieved with budgets that fall far short of those of our benchmark law schools.

Now, the College of Law faces its next pivotal moment. Our task is formidable but straightforward: to marshal the resources that will keep the College in the forefront of law schools while holding true to its commitment of providing service to the legal system and the profession. To accomplish this, the College needs our financial assistance to provide scholarships that will attract the best students, and endowments to recruit and keep outstanding faculty. Financial support is needed for programs offering students a variety of learning and service opportunities, for programs enabling faculty to further their research, and for the law library, all of which are key to helping students and faculty keep pace with a rapidly changing environment.

Ensuring the College's unique role in the decades ahead will require the devotion, support, and energies of all those who care about the College. Fortunately, the College of Law has always relished a tough challenge. Graduates and friends are asked to join in honoring the vision of the College with a commitment to bring their vision to even higher levels of achievement. I ask you to join that bold and challenging venture—for scholarship and service, for the University of Kentucky College of Law.

Sincerely,
Orson Oliver
Capital Campaign Chairman
